

When I discovered my Uncle Dan's fifth grade report card from 1914, I found a timeless two-sided treasure. The School Report was on the left, listing the usual subjects taught at school... reading, writing, and arithmetic. And The Home Report, on the right side of this little yellowed card, held the secret of my uncle's success in life!

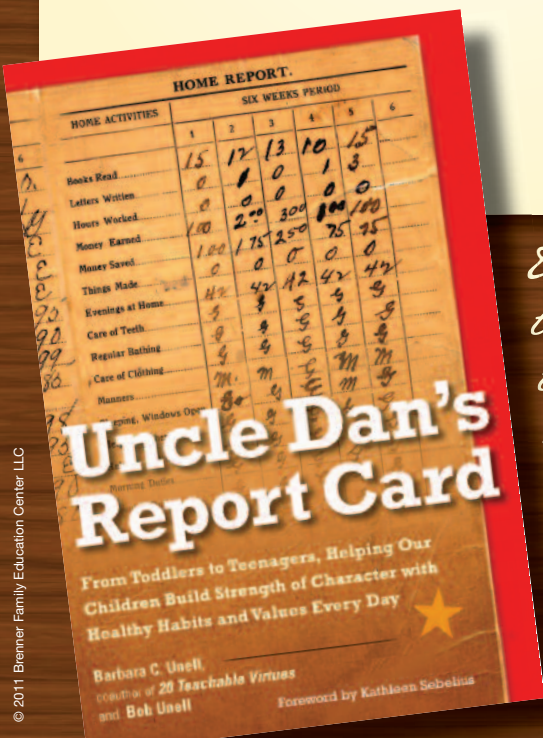

This Home Report listed the subjects that "the home" was expected to teach children 100 years ago—truthfulness and honesty, morning chores, evening chores, manners, care of teeth, evenings at home, habits of kindness, and a dozen more.

What happened to the expectation that it is a basic rite of passage for all children to be taught these habits and values every day? We answer that question and more in our new book, Uncle Dan's Report Card. Please join the conversation with your children and their caregivers by getting back to teaching these simple, basic lessons using this authentic copy of Uncle Dan's report card right here!

Together, let's love and raise the next great generation.

Barbara C. Unell
Parent Educator and Author

The new book that teaches children timeless values - inspired by the discovery of a 1914 report card.

Buy the book today!

UncleDansReportCard.org

The worth of the child cannot be measured in terms of "Per Cent" alone.

M. E. Pearson, Superintendent, Kansas City, Kansas, Public Schools, 1914

HOME REPORT.

HOME ACTIVITIES	SIX WEEKS PERIOD
	1	2	3	4	5	6
Books Read.....
Letters Written.....
Hours Worked.....
Money Earned.....
Money Saved.....
Things Made.....
Evenings at Home.....
Care of Teeth.....
Regular Bathing.....
Care of Clothing.....
Sleeping, Windows Open.....
Manners.....
Helping Father.....
Helping Mother.....
Morning Duties.....
Evening Duties.....
Obedience & Promptness.....
Habits of Kindness.....
Truthfulness and Honesty.....

Recognize when children are using one or more of these habits.

Reward the learning by marking the card together.

Repeat when this report card is filled with marks for good behavior.

For more report cards, go to UncleDansReportCard.org